THE EMERGING ISSUE- Continuity in Disconnection

MOST ORGANISATIONS
PLAN TO IMPLEMENT A REMOTE WORKING
BUSINESS CONTINUITY STRATEGY TO COUNTERACT THE IMPACT OF CORONA VIRUS

but.....

1. Current remote working practices are geared towards “self” working. Staff organise their work such that group collaboration is done in the office.
2. Group collaboration using current remote working tools (phone, e-mail, video conference etc) is not a replacement. Finally you have to get together physically.
3. Remote working as a business temporary continuity solution for a short outage is fine
4. But remote working for the weeks and weeks will destroy the productivity of an organisation’s operations. It will also irreparably damage human relationships.

Current remote working practices if used for the long term to deliver business continuity will damage the productivity of your organisation
